NOTES TO THE READER.

I. The Astronomical calculations in this work are made to true clock time. The effects of Refraction, according to the latest improved Tables of Bessel, and the Equation of time, have both been applied to the times of the Sun's rising and setting : so that the Almanac, and a good clock, will agree the year round.

II. A Time-piece may be set very nearly true by the rising, setting, or southing of the Sun, Moon, or Stars,—but more accurately by the Sun (or the southing of the Sun, or a fixed Star), anywhere on or near the 40th degree of north latitude.

III. The time of the rising, setting, or southing of a fixed Star, may be carried several days forward by subtracting, or backward by adding, 4 minutes per day.

IV. The common day of 24 hours, begins at midnight, and morning (marked morn.) continues from midnight till noon ; and afternoon (marked aft.) continues from noon till midnight ; this should be remembered carefully when looking for the times of the rising, setting, or southing of the Moon or Stars soon after midnight.

ECLIPSES.

In the year 1884 there will five eclipses, three of the Sun and two of the Moon.

I. A partial eclipse of the Sun, on the 27th of Third Month, invisible at Washington.

II. A total eclipse of the Moon, on the morning of the 10th of Fourth Month, the beginning will be visible as follows : New York, 3h. 45m. ; Philadelphia, 3h. 40m. ; Baltimore, 3h. 34m. ; Cincinnati, 3h. 3m. ; the middle and end occurs after sunrise, consequently invisible.

III. A partial eclipse of the Sun, on the 25th of Fourth Month, visible only in the Southern Hemisphere.

IV. A total eclipse of the Moon, on the evening of the Fourth of Tenth Month, the early phases occurring before the Moon rises. The Moon will rise totally eclipsed, the last phases occurring as follows :

	N. York.		Phila.		Balt.		Cin.
	H.	M.	H.	M.	H.	M.	H.	M.
Total eclipse ends,	5	53	5	48	5	42	5	11
Moon leaves shadow,	6	53	6	48	6	42	6	11
Moon leaves penumbra,	7	53	7	48	7	42	7	11

V. A partial eclipse of the Sun, on the 18th of Tenth Month, invisible at Washington.

VENUS. — Venus will be Evening Star until the 11th of Seventh Month, then Morning Star the remainder of the year. It will be at its greatest brilliancy on the 3d of Sixth Month and 17th of Eighth Month.

MERCURY. — Mercury will be brightest about the 12th of Second Month, 12th of Sixth Month, and 4th of Tenth Month, at which times it will likely be visible, being then in the East just before sunrise. It will again be brightest about the 3d of First Month, 25th of Fourth Month, and 23d of Eighth Month, and 17th of Twelfth Month, when it will be in the West immediately after sunset.

AN EPISTLE OF GEO. FOX.

[Extract.]

"Friends, to stand still in trouble, and see the strength of the Lord. Friends, whatever ye are addicted to, the tempter will come in that thing; and when he can trouble you, then he gets the advantage over you, and then ye are gone. Stand still in that which is pure, after ye see yourselves; and then mercy comes in. After thou seest thy thoughts, and thy temptations, do not think, but submit."

"Comfort came to them in the silent waiting on the Lord. Truly it was a season for glorifying God by strong faith in Him, and George Whitehead did not fail to use it as such. 'In those days I clearly saw,' he writes, 'that the testimony required of us to bear, was not so much in words, declamation, or ministry, as to stand our ground

"I will not," said one, and so said each one of the trio.

"Well," said the stranger, "in my ride this morning I saw some geese in a field, eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Certainly," said the three unbelievers.

"I also saw pigs eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Of course," said the three.

"And I also saw sheep and cows eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Of course," was again replied.

"Well, but the grass which they had formerly eaten, had, by digestion, turned into feathers on the backs of the geese, to bristles on the backs of the swine, to wool on the sheep, and on the cows it had turned to hair; do you believe that, gentlemen?"

"Certainly," they replied.

"Yes, you believe it," he re-precious "talents" wherewith to "trade" for the Master. It may be well frequently to look over these "talents" and question ourselves as to whether we are trading with them to the very best account, so that when He cometh and reckoneth He may receive His own with usury.

Are we hiding in the earth any of the following talents? viz:—

Our testimony to the immediate teaching of the Holy Spirit in the soul of the believer.

To the light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

To the non-necessity of outward rites in religion.

To the freedom of the Gospel Ministry.

To the sole headship of Christ in His Church.

SECRET RELIGION.

God is often lost in prayers and ordinances. "Enter into thy chamber," said He, "and shut thy door about thee." "Shut thy door about thee," means much; it means, shut out not only frivolity but business; not only company abroad, but the company at home; it means, let thy poor soul have a little rest and refreshment, and God have opportunity to speak to thee in a still small voice, or He will speak in thunder. I am persuaded that the Lord would often speak more softly, if we would shut the door.

CECIL.

THE path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

The great truths of religion should be taught so early that the mind should never remember when it began to learn, or when it was without this knowledge. Whenever it turns a retrospective view upon the preceding periods of its existence, these truths should always seem to have been in its possession; to have the character of innate principles; to have been inwoven in its nature, and to constitute a part of all its current thinking.

DWIGHT.

If a man is active in business and acquires property, but all supremely for himself and for this world merely, his activity stands in the way of his salvation; and his acquisition of property, if this course is continued, will engross his whole heart, and drown him in destruction. But if he is active and acquires property for the sake of honoring God and doing good, his very activity will tend to promote his salvation, and while diligent in business, he will be fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. JUSTIN EDWARDS.

They whom the world calls idle are often doing the most. In villages and by-lanes open eyes are always learning. A garden, a wood, a pool of water, encloses a whole library of knowledge, waiting only to be made everlasting types, which nature in her printing press never breaks up. And surely he is happy who is thus taught; for no man can afford to be really unemployed.

The tree, it is said, may lose its verdure, the sun need not count its rays; because the sun will strike out new foliage, and another night refills the treasury of the day. But the thinking faculty does not suffer waste.

When Joseph Lancaster had finished his lecture from the chair of the House of Representatives, in the United States, Mr. Clay, the Speaker, complimented him, saying that the chair had never before been filled so well. Mr. Lancaster very modestly replied, that man, in his purest aspect, was but a very humble instrument in the hands of a higher Power; the chair he had just filled, exalted as it was, had not been filled with anything better than Clay.

“There is no character in Christian history since the days of its divine founder” (says the Annual Review and History of Literature), “more free from spot or stain than that of George Fox. It is not less absurd to pronounce him insane from his writings, than it would be to pronounce Cromwell a fool from his speeches. By their actions they are to be judged. No form of civil polity so unexceptionable in its means and end, so beautiful in all its parts, so perfect as a whole, has ever been imagined in philosophical romance, or proposed in theory, as this man conceived, established, and reduced to practice.”

“Measure not men by Sundays, without regarding what they do all the week after.”

1	24	14	5 24	11 16	1 4	Spurgeon tells a story of a poor man, who had a large family, and gave them a very comfortable support while he was in health. He broke his leg, and had been laid up for some weeks. It was proposed to hold a prayer meeting at his house. The meeting was led by Deacon Brown. A loud knock at the door interrupted the service. A tall, lank, blue-frocked youngster stood at the door, with an ox-goad in his hand, and asked to see Deacon Brown. "Father could not attend this meeting," he said, "but he sent his prayers, and they are out in the cart." They were brought in in the shape of potatoes, beef, pork, and corn. The meeting broke up without the benediction.

THE EDUCATION OF CHARACTER.

The only drawback to enthusiasm in any good cause, is, that it may so absorb us as to prevent us from recognizing something else equally needful. Were we large enough to include both, the more zeal we possessed the better ; but as we are so limited in power, we should beware of exhausting it in a single direction. It may be considered at least questionable, whether, in our rightful desire to promote intellectual education among our people, we are not in some danger of forgetting the education of character. We do not, because we cannot, overrate the importance of the former, but we may, and, probably do, greatly underrate the value of the latter.

In words, indeed, this is not the case. We are all ready to declare, with emphasis, our belief that character is far more necessary to the welfare of the individual and the good of society than any amount of learning or information. Yet this belief must be rather one of the head than of the heart, for, unfortunately, it does not effectively influence our practice. The mental discipline gained by intellectual studies is eagerly craved by the parent for his child, and by every lover of his nation for her people, and being thus eagerly craved, it is, of course, secured ; continual accessions are being made to it in improved methods—teachers and text books—and the best thought of competent persons is constantly being brought to bear upon it. Now, if we really believed in our own hearts what we profess to hold,—that, important as this all may be, the possession of a good character for truth, honesty, fidelity, and industry is vastly more important,—should we not see fruits of such a belief exhibited in at least equal efforts to promote it?

It is true every parent hopes that his child will have it, and many a faithful mother inculcates moral principle so earnestly, and presents so high an example of it in her own life, that her children grow up well fortified against temptation. This, however, is by no means universal, and to neglect it is not considered near so disgraceful as to neglect having a child taught to read and write. Conscientious teachers, too, strive hard to train the moral faculties of their pupils, but they labor at a disadvantage. Their efforts are necessarily desultory; they have neither time nor experience nor preparation for the task; provision for it has not been made in the system, and they have to contend with difficulties which discourage and dishearten them.

The truth is, that moral training has yet to be organized and systematized, before it can be carried on with efficiency on a large scale, and this will not be done until its importance is more fully felt than at present. It is taken for granted, in a loose kind of way, that a good character will come of itself to most people. No one supposes that knowledge comes of itself; that mental power can be gained without trouble; that a trade or profession can be successfully pursued without previous systematic preparation. Yet all or any of these are more possible than that a character, worthy of respect and admiration, should spring up without being built, or without either care or knowledge on the part of the builder of the materials he uses, or the way in which to combine them.

To any one who patiently and thoughtfully considers the relative value to the world, to the nation, to the family, to the individual, of character, and of what is popularly called education, it will be a matter of profound astonishment that so much time, thought, and resources, should be expended on the one and so little on the other. Take the workman who is industrious, sober, honest and truthful, but who has barely learned to read, and place him side by side with another who has enjoyed years of mental training, but who is lazy, or intemperate, or unfaithful. No one would hesitate in pronouncing the former a far more valuable member of society, a better husband and father, a better citizen, a better and happier man. So the college bred man who may have taken honors and begun a brilliant career, but who is a spendthrift or gambler, or dishonorable in business, or self-indulgent, is vastly inferior, considered in any point of view, to the man who, with but few advantages of culture, has firm principle, provides for his family, and lives honorably before the world.

So in every case where moral character and intellectual acquirements are compared, it must be to the superiority of the former. Whether the parent is providing for the honor and happiness of his child, or the Government is planning for the social value of its citizens, the work of character-building must take precedence of mental culture, both in time and importance.

The extreme delicacy and difficulty of this part of education, afford one reason, doubtless, why it is so largely put aside. This, however, when admitted, should give an additional incentive for bringing all our powers to bear upon a subject at once so important to human welfare, and so little understood. Character is formed by habits, habits by repeated actions, and actions result from awakened feelings. If we would, then, successfully build up character worthy of esteem, we must present motives to right action, and strengthen the tendencies to such action by securing continuous repetition. Not by perpetually reiterating rules of conduct, insisting on one thing and denouncing another; not mainly by reasoning or explaining, or holding up consequences to view; but by so operating upon the emotions and desires as to strengthen the higher and weaken the lower, and by thus developing the germs of moral principle which exist in every heart, are good habits formed and character established.—Ledger.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

THERE is many a rest in the road of life,
 If we only would stop to make it;
 And many a tone from the better land,
 If the querulous heart would take it.
 To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
 And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
 The grass is green, and the flowers are bright,
 Though the wintry storm prevaieth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
 And to keep the eyes still lifted,
 For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
 When the ominous clouds are rifted!
 There was never a night without a day,
 Or an evening without a morning;
 And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
 Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life
 Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
 That is richer far than the jewelled crown,
 Or the miser's hoarded treasure.
 It may be the love of a little child,
 Or a mother's prayers to heaven,
 Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
 For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
 A bright and golden filling,
 And to do God's will with a ready heart,
 And hands that are swift and willing,
 Than to snap the delicate, minute threads
 Of our curious lives asunder,
 And then blame Heaven for the tangled ends,
 And sit and grieve and wonder.—M. A. Kidder.

STRICTNESS OF RELIGION—THE SLAVERY OF FASHION.

Is it not whimsical to hear such complaints against the strictness of religion, as we are frequently hearing, from the beings who are voluntarily pursuing a course of life which fashion makes infinitely more severe? How really burdensome would Christianity be, if she enjoined such a succession of fatigues. If religion commanded such hardships and self-denial, such days of hurry, such evenings of exertion, such nights of broken rest, such perpetual sacrifices of quiet, such exile from family delights as fashion imposes, then, indeed, the service of Christianity would no longer merit its present appellation of being a 'reasonable service;' then the name of perfect slavery might be justly applied to that which we are told is a service of perfect freedom; a service, the great object of which is to deliver us from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God.—Hannah More.

Greater is he that subdueth his own spirit, than he that taketh a city.

A FOOT LAMP.

One of the most interesting things in the Holy Land is the fact that one meets everywhere, in daily life, the things that illustrate the language of Holy Scripture. The streets of Jerusalem are very narrow, and no one is allowed to go out at night without a light. Throw open your lattice in the evening and look out, you will see what seems to be little stars twinkling on the pavement. You will hear the clatter of sandals, as the late traveller rattles along. As the party approaches, you will see that he has a little lamp fastened to his foot, to make his step a safe one. In an instant the voice comes to your memory, written in that same city three thousand years ago—"Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."

ANGELS DO NOT CHEW.

The following is said to be true: A preacher out West was a good man, but very rough in his ways, and very much given to chewing tobacco. One time he was riding on horseback through the country when there came up a shower. Riding up to a cabin, he hastily hitched his horse and knocked at the door. A sharp-looking old lady answered the summons. The preacher asked for shelter. "I don't take in strangers; I don't know you," replied the old lady suspiciously.

"But you know what the Bible says," said the preacher. "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

"You needn't quote the Bible," said the old lady, quickly, "No angel would come down from heaven with a quid of tobacco in his mouth, as you have."

The door was shut, and the preacher unhitched his horse and rode away in the rain.—Sabbath School Visitor.

"There is no greater mistake than to suppose that Christians can impress the world by agreeing with it. No, it is not conformity that we want, it is not being able to beat the world in its own way, but it is to stand apart from, and above it, and to produce the impression of a holy and separate life; this only can give us a true Christian power."

DARK CLOTHES FOR HOT WEATHER.

We have more than once asked attention for the undoubted effect of color on the radiating power of clothing. Certainly light-colored clothing substances approaching to white do not part with their heat so readily as dark. The bear of the polar regions is for this reason provided with white fur, while her brother of warmer climates has dark colored integument. It therefore seems desirable to wear light clothes in winter, and dark hues in summer. While campaigning in a tropical country under the hottest of suns, I became aware that a black coat was cooler than a white one, both being of the same weight, texture and thickness—in short, cæteris paribus, save the color. The fact led me to reflection, to correlation of other facts and circumstances observed at the same time, as on other occasions. For one I could see that my negro servant alongside me, enveloped in a coal-black skin, did not suffer from the fervid rays of the sun half so much as I under my tripe-colored epidermis. What could this be but a provision of nature—merciful nature—made for him whose home was to be in the torrid zone?—London Lancet.

“One of the finest sayings in the language,” writes Charles Buxton, “is John Foster’s ‘live mightily,’ and George Whitehead had learned the secret of doing this—a secret revealed not alone to those who, in ‘obeying the ideal of life’ set before them, conspicuously glorify God but also to the humblest followers of Christ in obscure corners of the world, who cleave to their Lord with that living faith which of necessity bears the fruit of faithfulness. ‘Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord.’”

Professed Christians have not only made war on each other, but have attempted to "sanctify all the horrors" and even all the crimes of war, by religious ceremonies. Not indeed the ceremonies of the bloody and revengeful religion of pagans, but the ceremonies of the benign and peaceful religion of Jesus Christ.—NOAH WEBSTER.

Men of learning and study are forever tempted to begin at the intellectual side of things, and from that to try to work their way to the possession of full-formed Christian convictions. It is a vain dream, though perhaps nothing but trial and failure will convince most men that it is so.—Selected.

Let us, if we must have wars, not think of making a prayer to be used before murder. Bad actions are made worse by hypocrisy. War is in itself so bad a thing that there is only one way of making it worse, and that is by mixing religion with it.—LETITIA BARBAULD.

Among the best men are diversities of opinions, which are no more, in true reason, to breed hatred than one that loves black should be angry with him that is clothed in white; for thoughts are the very apparel of the mind.—Sir Philip Sydney.
